

The book cover features a large, grey elephant trunk that curves from the top left towards the right. A white rabbit with long pink ears and a pink scarf is perched on the trunk, holding a small orange flower. A yellow bird with a long beak is perched on the trunk above the rabbit. A purple butterfly is flying in the blue sky. The background includes a green tree on the left and a green grassy field with small red flowers at the bottom. The title is written in large, colorful, stylized letters.

The RABBIT

who lived up an

ELEPHANT'S TRUNK

Written by Adrian Morgan

Illustrations by Travis Richardson & Rosie Byles

A rabbit who lived up an elephant's trunk
Was feeling extremely displeased

With the effort it took just to clean out the gunk
Whenever the elephant sneezed.

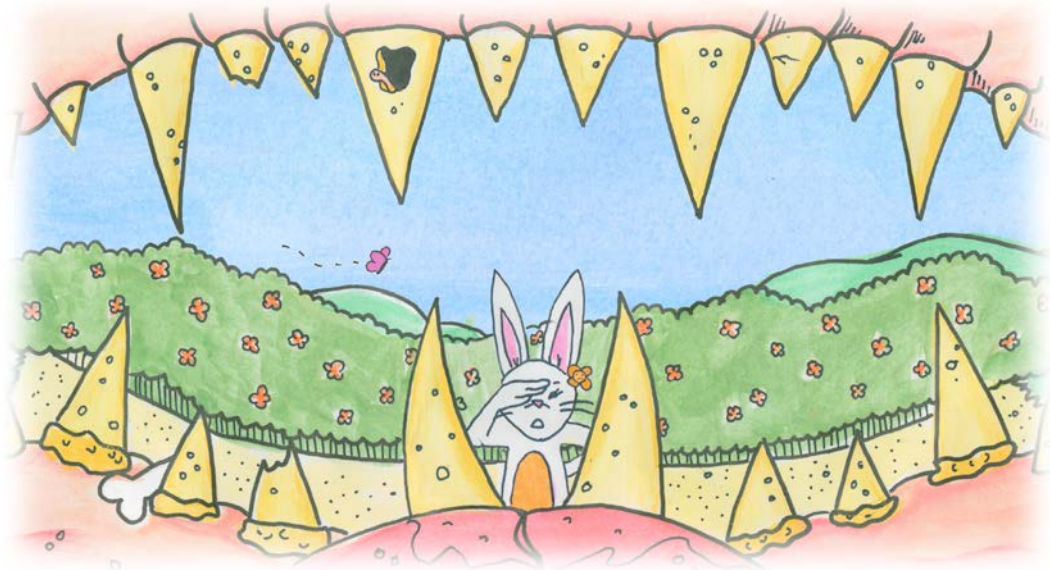

So she looked all around for the optimal place
For which she had started to hope

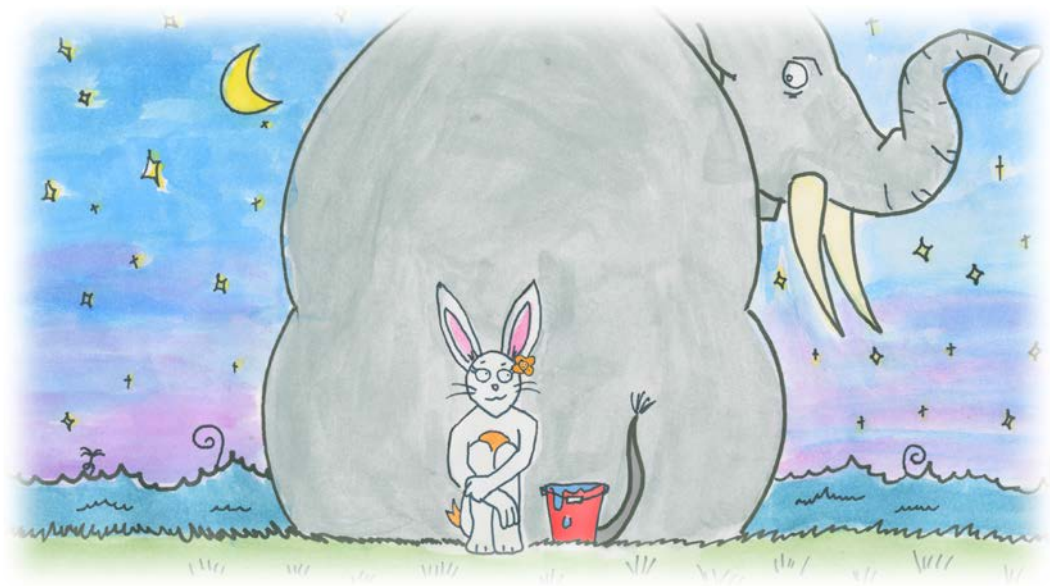

And was offered just one, which was not in good taste
Being deep down a crocodile's throat.

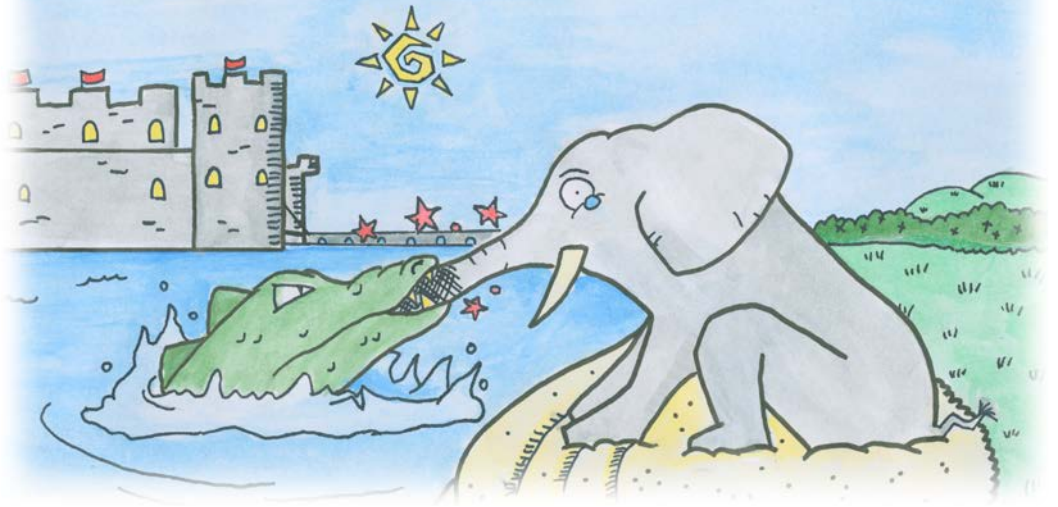

Well, I couldn't live there, thought the rabbit, because
There are too many teeth at the door.

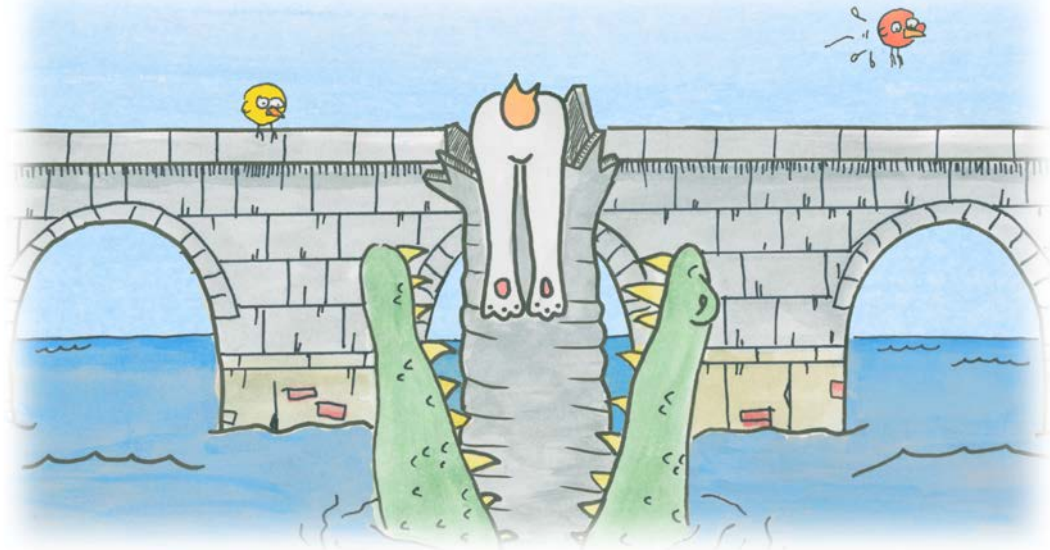

I might as well stay in the trunk where I was
And put up with cleaning the floor.

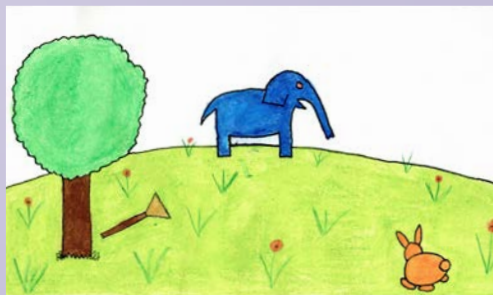

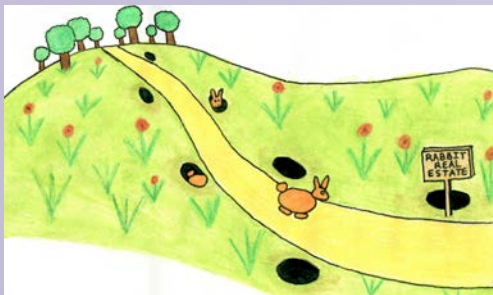

But later the elephant stopped by the moat
And the crocodile bit off a chunk

So the rabbit is now in the crocodile's throat
As well as the elephant's trunk.

The illustrations shown here were drawn by the author for an unfinished version of this book.